Elementary Union.

After a rest during the summer months, the elementary union will resume its regular work again on next Tuesday.

This union was organized soon after the county Sunday school convention met in this city, and it has since held some very interesting and helpful meetings.

It is for all of the elementary teachers of the different Sunday schools of the city and many talks and thoughts are gained by those who attend.

A book on "Practical Pedagogy in the Sunday School" was taken up and discussed last year, and proved very helpful to the teachers.

As the new year begins, let all of the teachers in this department come as often as possible to the meetings. A full program of next meeting will be published later in the week.

Y. W. A.

The Y. W. A. met in the Sunday school auditorium on last Sunday afternoon with about twenty-five present. Miss Nell Bewley was received as a new member. The work for the coming year was discussed and some recommendations from the executive committee were adopted. A rally was planned for next Sunday and all the young women of the church are asked to come.

A splendid program was given on "Home Missions" with Miss Beale Major as leader. The Scripture lesson was read by Miss Kathleen McGee. Miss Frances Riley talked interestingly on "Social Service," and told how it was related to missionary work. Miss Wallace read a paper on "My Time, My Money, and My Talents for Home Missions."

The Y. W. A. is happy to give up its efficient secretary, Miss Lou Nello McGee, who goes to the college for the coming year. Miss Mary Riley was elected to fill this vacancy.

One on Doctor Wiley.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, food expert, tells of a trip he made to a place in Carolina to make a propagandist speech, says The National Food Magazine. It goes something like this: "I checked my bag at the station and engaged an old negro hackman to drive me to the hall. He seemed very much worried over my lack of baggage."

"Most every gent what comes here's got something to sell," he said. "Maybe youse got something to sell, boss?"

"Oh, yes," I told him. "I sell wit and wisdom."

"The old negro scratched his head and scolded. 'Well, boss, he said, finally, you is de first man I ever toted what didn't carry no samples.'"

"True love cannot be bought," ventures one who comments upon marriage for money. In the average life-long experience it is much more melancholy that it is hard to buy true fresh eggs and country butter.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"Now, Tommy," said the teacher, "you may give an example of a colicience." "Why, er—" said Tommy, with some hesitation, "why—no father and mother was both married on de same day."—Chicago News.

Of Interest To Women

By Sarah M. Trescott.

BEAUTY

Why should so many women let themselves grow old and ugly, for want of a little care. We cannot all be beautiful, also that it should be so; but we can all be presentable, and at least try and keep the little good looks a kindly providence has bestowed on us. I am not an advocate of paint, or of putting oneself in the hands of some dishonest beauty apothecary, who not only robs you of your money, but generally of your complexion. Paint does not enhance ones appearance, and in the end is decidedly injurious to the skin, but everyone should have on her dressing table, her own particular brand of cold cream and powder. The same kind of cream does not suit all skins, what is good for one, is harmful to another. Select the one that suits yours, and that you get the best results from, and stick to that, don't try a dozen kinds yearly, and then wonder why your complexion is so bad. Many think cold cream should be used much, and water sparingly on the face, they imagine the cream cleanses more perfectly, but there I do not agree with them. Water and soap—and here again use one brand of soap—always should be used on face and neck every night before retiring, twice a week use very hot water, not often, as it has a tendency to wrinkle the skin, plunging your face in cold water immediately afterwards, then the creams come in, first the cleansing, then the massage cream. If a professional massage is near, and knows her business, go to her regularly, she is an invaluable ally in your scheme of good looks. Many women deny massage, creams, and tonics for skin and hair, saying that kind of thing is a waste of time, and money, never were people more mistaken. Every woman owes it to herself to look her best, to make the most of whatever good looks, great or small she happens to have. Take one hour a day, no matter how busy you are, and give it to yourself. Most women need that hour a day, and need it badly. No one neglects a daily bath, why neglect your face, neck and hands, being so much exposed, and so hardly used, they demand daily attention, and seldom get it. A hasty dipping of your poor countenance into the basin, a half rub of a towel, to hide all deficiencies in what most faces get, and yet they bewail their looks. Take an up-to-date woman, note her upright, well kept figure, her clear, smooth complexion, her prettily arranged, and well cared for hair, and compare her with one who does not care, or thinks it is time wasted to give that one hour attention to herself, her mallow skin, with wrinkles covering it like a well defined war map, carelessly arranged hair and ill kept hands, tell their own tale.

Beauty may be but "skin deep" but it is skin well worth caring for.

SMART FALL FASHIONS

The popularity of the princess dress is very noticeable, and a very attractive costume it is. A new note in this fetching gown is the deep chemise of black satin. Should the color of dark material prove unbefitting, which it generally is, except to very youthful faces, an overcollar of the new plaited organdy, or mull, will change matters wonderfully. These plaitings are very pretty, and most becoming and softening to all faces. Everyone should have a sport coat, it is not only a very useful garment, but stylish in the extreme. It is worn by many smart women at the north and in cold climates, but I should think they would be the very thing for our inclement winters, they come in corduroy, duvetyne, and velvet, and in all colors.

Furs are to be much in evidence this year, those who own fine sets ought to rejoice. Fur is becoming to all faces, but a fresh rosy countenance, smiling from the rich brown, or glossy black of a deep fur collar, is a very charming sight, but not if the collar is made hideous by a dozen dangling glassy eyed heads of the unfortunate little animals to whom the collar first belonged.

Why women will wear such atrocities I cannot understand. I have even heard them speak of those fearful heads "cute" and "cunning."

Evening dresses are really enchantingly pretty, the combination of two fabrics, satin and crepe, or chiffon, makes a very distinctive style. The Pictorial Review has pictured two particularly charming ones, which they speak of as "adorably quaint" and they are, one is in alencon lace and net, with long pointed tubie trimmed in dark fur, the other in pearl gray silk voile, and shadow lace, they are cleverly designed, and yet have an effect of beautiful simplicity that is most effective. Both could be copied in less expensive material and still retain their distinctive quality, if the idea, and the lines are closely followed.

Fashion Fixes Price.

That fashion band not intrinsic value skyrockets the price of fancy weaves was recently acknowledged by a cotton manufacturer. He was speaking of "gaberdine," the season's favorite.

"Why do you know," he said, "it's the same old imitation cotton serge that we've been making and selling to retailers in small towns in the south and west for years? It never would 'go' as the larger cities, but now that it's been given this new French name of the woolen goods so popular this spring, when the supply gets short, the price goes up. It's our chance, and the retailer's—and we both take it."

This is an excellent illustration of the way in which ignorance of the real value of a fabric plays the buyer into the hand of the merchant.

Have you given proper thought about the purity of the Eatables placed upon your table to be given your children for Instance, when you are compelled to use canned good, do you buy

Nothing but the best, or do you consider the price and the quality,

Best is the proper term to use in talking about the

"57" Varieties, each one is a real relish and absolutely pure.
